

I believe cell phone use must be restricted to times when the plane is on the ground. Passengers should be able to use the devices to notify others of their arrival or departure situation, but not in-flight. Quarters are too cramped in a plane for chatting. Separate seating areas for cell phone use is a bad idea for those sitting adjacent to that area who choose not to use a cell phone. Smoking sections on planes were a bad idea; so are cell phone sections.

I fly approximately 10 times a year.